United Refining Company/Kwik Fill Wins Forbes Award for Fourth Consecutive Year

Warren, PA – United Refining Company and its retail brand, Kwik Fill, are proud to announce that they have been named to the Forbes list of America’s Best Mid-Size Employers for the fourth year in a row.

This recognition, awarded based on employee feedback and independent surveys conducted by Forbes and Statista Inc., reflects the company’s continued commitment to providing a positive, supportive workplace and delivering exceptional service to communities across New York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio.

“We are honored to receive this award once again,” said John Catsimatidis Jr., President and Chief Operating Officer of Red Apple Group. “This recognition is a testament to the hard work, integrity, and dedication of every employee across our organization. Our people are the heart of our business, and we remain committed to creating a workplace where they can grow, thrive, and be proud of what they do.”

The Forbes award is based on a survey of more than 45,000 employees working for companies with at least 1,000 people in their U.S. operations. Participants rated their willingness to recommend their employer and also evaluated other companies in their industry. Founded in 1902, United Refining Company is a refiner of crude oil privately owned by John Catsimatidis Sr, Chief Executive Officer – Red Apple Group and is located in Warren, PA. Along with the refinery, United owns and operates multiple terminals along with more than 400 retail locations. With a legacy of nearly 125 years in refining, retail, and fuel distribution, United Refining Company continues to strengthen its reputation as a trusted employer and community partner.
